When detaching from an elastic fabric substrate, mushroom arrays do not in general follow a linear force-strain relationship characterized by the "per mushroom" modulus E. Rather, the fiber stretching imposes a power law on the force-distance curve, which we show in Figure ?? as a straight line through on a plot of $\log \frac{f}{NA}$ against $\log \lambda$.